

Jacob's Forest Poem

Isolated, tall, long trees spreading leaves across the rocky river, colour stretches as far as the eye can see as fields of flowers climb the muddy hills, rivers run like rabbits on a field of green.
Plants overtake the roads of man, turning them into a canvas, on which the world paints the grass and flowers.

July 2017